15,000 readers worldwide... the indispensable guide to the artform

Longest established

Established in 1909, Poetry Review, the magazine of the Poetry Society, is one of the world's longest established and most respected contemporary poetry periodicals.

A must-read

Offering over one hundred pages of poetry, original essays, reviews and comment, including contributions from Nobel prize-winners to unpublished newcomers, Poetry Review is widely held to be the indispensable guide to the artform.

More readers worldwide

With approximately 15,000 readers worldwide, and subscribers from schools, colleges and universities, writing groups and libraries, as well as individual enthusiasts, Poetry Review reaches a larger audience than any other UK poetry periodical. Identified by The Guardian as the 'magazine of record', it is also the first choice of the poetry profession.
